SUMMER 2016

PILGRIMAGE

The idea of pilgrimage is pre-Christian. In various religions and philosophies of the pagan world, it was thought important to travel to sacred groves, mountain tops, springs, caves where it was thought that gods or goddesses had residence. Early on in Christian history, Jesus' entry into the wilderness was considered a pilgrimage as was Abraham's journey from Haran in southern Turkey to what would later be called the Promised Land of Israel. Early Christians also applied the moniker to Moses, and the Israelite slaves as they meandered for forty years in the deserts in and around Mount Sinai.

Throughout Christian history women and men have taken pilgrimages as a way to draw closer to God. Often asceticism is part and parcel of the journey, an imitation of Jesus' 40 fasting period in the wastelands surrounding the Dead Sea before his public ministry began. In the 3rd and 4th Centuries of the Christian era, men and women moved from city to desert in order to clear out the urban racket of Rome and other large cities. The two great ascetic migrations were in the deserts of Egypt, and Cappadocia, a central province in Asia Minor, and what is now the nation of Turkey.

The first pilgrim in the Holy Land was Helena, the mother of Emperor Constantine, whose victory at the Milvian Bridge in Rome (312) secured Christianity as the religion of choice not only in that capital but throughout the Roman world. Scholars debate whether Constantine really believed or whether he viewed this up and coming—and heretofore sporadically persecuted religion—as the glue to cement dynastic ambition. It appears that Mom certainly counted herself a follower, however, and shortly after her son's accession, made a pilgrimage to the Holy Land larded with a boatload of money with which she built churches wherever the locals told her Jesus sat, ate, preached taught and healed. I've journeyed to Israel three times, and am thankful for Helena's largesse. It is wonderful to worship in shrines and small churches in the Holy Land whether or not the sites are exactly where Jesus carried out his ministry. They're close enough, and I've been deeply moved, for example, on Mount Tabor, the traditional site of Jesus' Transfiguration as well as the Church of the Beatitudes, a slope above the northern end of the Sea of Galilee where tradition locates Christ's Sermon on the Mount.

I count myself a pilgrim. Although motives are diverse, my trips to Israel enlivened my faith because I felt nearer to the presence of Christ. From Nazareth, his hometown, one can view the great valley of Megiddo below, and understand that the boy could not help absorb the history of his people because so many battles were fought on those plains, and, in fact, the valley of Megiddo ('Har-Megiddo') is where the book of Revelation relates the end time battle will be fought (Har-Meggido=Armageddon). It was wonderful to spend time in the seaside town of Capernaum on the Sea of Galilee where Jesus called fishermen, his first disciples. Archeologists have uncovered the foundations of first century homes beneath a second century church, one of which may be the dwelling of Peter. I've hiked around the Decapolis which borders the eastern shore of the Sea of Galilee to find the traditional areas where Jesus healed the Gerasene demoniac, and sent his evil spirits into pigs.

In Jerusalem, I've been moved visiting tombs in the Church of the Holy Sepulcher where tradition holds that Jesus was buried and resurrected. Then the cave in Bethlehem, where the embodied Good News began. I could go on but let me move on instead. As many of you know I'm embarking on a two wheeled pilgrimage from San Francisco to Portsmouth N.H. It encompasses 52 days and is part of the Clergy Renewal program which the Lily foundation and your kindness granted me This sort is an ascetic endeavor, to say the least, although a bike mechanic noted that I'll be a glutton to counteract the wear and tear of the biking miles. I may be the oldest cyclist in the pack, and perhaps the least experienced. Although this is not a traditional pilgrimage, it does share elements of how Christians have construed the idea over the ages. First, I'll be in strange lands which, because of personal deficits in orienteering ability, may truly be foreign. In this sense I'm like Abraham who was not given a compass or road map when God called him to journey south into that amorphous area simply known as the Negev. As the parable of the Prodigal Son reminds, we often experience God's presence profoundly when we are literally or figuratively lost. I may indeed become like the children Israel, wandering in the deserts of Utah rather than the Sinai with little clue where I am! Physical exertion reminds me of Moses' forty mile trek with his people, and Jesus' depletion at the end of his forty day fast in the wilderness. Like Helena, I'm sure to encounter sites which will be hallowed simply because I experience Christ's presence fully and maybe even fiercely.

Finally pilgrimage affords the opportunity to simplify, and journey back in time. I believed that the joy I discover in biking was the product of my call to Hurley. "God spoketh to me, 'Seeth thou a wonerfulleth church thou shalt serve, along with the royal road I createth known by mankind as the Rail Trail. There thou shalt rideth thy bike, and createth sermons, and tryeth thy best to remain upright—on thy bike that is as well as morally.'" When God speaks in King James English, one is commanded to listen! I know little about riding, and would never refer to myself as a cyclist. The word connotes one who knows what he or she is doing. I'm simply a recreational rider who, I believe, was called by God to play in this manner. The existentialist Jean Paul Sartre once wrote that "Man is only free when he plays." I think the old deceased atheist makes a good point. And I hope we all get a chance to play over the summer in whatever outdoor activity God created you to enjoy if not love. And for me, bicycle playing goes back to my childhood. That's what I had forgotten. It is only recently, thumbing through childhood photographs that I discovered my four year old self on a tricycle next to my father dressed in his Army suit and hat. I could not remember the kid who rode a tricycle, and then, a little later, a Huffy two wheeler with training wheels, and then two Raleigh English Racers. What's happened is that God saw fit to resurrect wonderful childhood memories. What a blessing. My favorite poet, T.S. Eliot once wrote, "In my beginning is my end." This summer I pray that you rediscover childhood joys which animated your life, and still retain the power to give you joy in the present.

See you in September.

A SACRED PLACE OF BEAUTY AND CONTEMPLATION.

(LOCATED ON THE SOUTH LAWN OF THE CHURCH)

They say charity begins at home and for the month of June our Mission contributions will go to the PRESERVATION FUND.* We are blessed to have both a beautiful and historic Church and a beautiful and historic home, for which we are stewards.

Both buildings are landmarks in the town of Hurley and contribute to the historic attraction of its Main Street.

Money collected from the Mission envelopes will be earmarked specifically for projects in the Church. These are projects above and beyond the usual maintenance work. They are geared to preserving the historic features of the Church.

*“The Fund has been established to provide for necessary improvements to the Church and the parsonage. The dedicated funds will be used specifically to undertake needed work to these historic and iconic buildings for which the Hurley Reformed Church has stewardship. Much work has been deferred over the years and extensive repair or replacement is required. Anticipated work areas include: sanctuary window restoration, parsonage bathrooms, parsonage kitchen, parsonage exterior work such as re-pointing of masonry and brick and replacement of rotted wood.”

In July we will be collecting to buy supplies to donate to the Pregnancy Support Center and our August Mission is Angel Food East, an organization which provides food for shut ins.

PARSONAGE RENOVATION PROJECT

Our parsonage is one of the architectural jewels of our state let alone our village. Through the voluntary efforts of church members, much work has been done on less than a shoestring budget. More than any other part in our stone manse, however, the upstairs bathroom has fared the worst and will be the main focus of the repairs for now.

We have secured a substantial donation from an anonymous donor. This donation covers most of the costs for the renovation. As a result, the renovations will be done while Doc Bob is on sabbatical this summer.

Heart felt thanks for the donation.

you*

STONE HOUSE DAY

Stone House Day

2016 is coming up on July 9. For those of you who have newly joined our Church, Stone House Day is our main fundraiser, and is a wonderful opportunity to participate and meet new people. We will need lots of help: docents in all the houses, help in the cafeteria, kitchen and dining room, Granny's Garret in the basement, parking lot and lots of other things. We will need all of you to make this a successful and wonderful day.

We will have 8 stone houses open to the public (as you probably know all the stone houses in the area are privately owned and lived in) and they are only open one day a year. We also have a "festival" of colonial crafts, children's crafts, a colonial militia, musical and theatrical performances, etc. If you like to talk to people and would like to show them around one of these houses, or if you like to cook or serve or clean up, please let me know as soon as possible. If you have never been a docent (host/hostess), we will have a short workshop before the event, probably after church service on July 3 in the Dutch Room. It will only take about 20 minutes or so. The hours for the docents are either 10 - 1, or 1 to 4, and we have lots of "colonial" looking outfits for you to wear.

If you have worked in the Kitchen on previous Stone House Days, and would like to do that again this year, please speak to Roberta Falatyn or me in Church, since we are trying to get our Kitchen organized at this time. We serve about 400 people, and always get rave reviews, so please participate if you can. It is a big undertaking, and we need help both on Friday, for prep work, and on Saturday. If you would like to work half a day, that can be arranged, of course. We have had comments saying that we should all wear "outfits", and we have enough for everybody.

We also have Granny's Garrett where we sell antiques and jewelry and some church commemoratives, as well as a Bake Sale (upstairs on the stage), and a quilt raffle, made by the ladies of the Church. We love to have young people involved, so if you have a teenager in your house who would like to help, we would love it.

Sincerely,

Ellen Richards,
Chairperson
